The Springfield (Mass.) Republican says that President Johnson, in his tour, repeated himself in his speeches. He certainly did, to some small extent, for he made six or seven speeches, often quite long once, every day for eight or nine days or more, and there were some important considerations which he thought it has the States are in the Union, if that proposition is right, that they are in the Union—if that proposition is right, that they have a right to or more, and there were some important considerations which he thought it his duty to present to every gathering of his fellow-zitizens that he addressed, and he thought that a tenth part of could not expect that a tenth part of either of his audiences would see what he had said to other audiences. We don't believe that there is any man in the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country who could make so many speeches and the country to elect, that is to say, on the termination of the country who could make so many speeches and the country to elect, that is to say, on the termination of the rebellion. Did the President bonestly believe that he had anything to do with it? wants opportunity to repeat the atrocitie of the past.

No amount of five writing and rhetorical flourish, and parade of devotion to the Constitution and the Union, will convince Mr. Roscoe Conkling is an eloquent us that those who upheld the flag in the face of its enemies, are respected or safe in their labitations. It is very likely that there are places in the South where Union men are safe from the malignant hatred that hounds them in Arkansas, and assassinates them under cover of the wilderness or the solitude, but those places are not so distant from military posts that "the avenging Nemesis in blue may not overtake and punish the guilty. It may not be possible to so govern and coutrol these States as to altogether prevent such deeds as are making Arkansas a reproach, but it is possible to determine the conditions upon which the people who permit such atrocities to go unpunished shall be permitted to recover their forfeited rights in the Federal Union. us that those who upheld the flag in the fac political knowledge at present is scarcely unimpeachable. It will doubtless improve with his years, which are still green. Mr. Hendricks was not a member of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate in 1865, and neither he nor Mr. Reverdy Johnson concurred in any such doctrine as that asserted in the quotation given by the favorite son of Utica. On the contrary Mr Johnson, in the debate tonching the representation of certain rebellious States in the Electoral College, expressly re the Federal Union. sition to it, laid down the selfsame doc

LDS. COM.: I noticed under the editorial, "Slanghter of Southern Loyalists in Arkansas, in your paper of this date, the name of the ex-Sheriff of Jefferson county, Arkansas, which should be Frank Kendall, and not Franklin Kennedy, as you have it. I was acquainted with Mr. Kendall as Sheriff of Jefferson county, Arkansus, from the spring of 1851 to October, 1863, and during the whole of that time, he was an ardent and faithful rebel, or supporter of the Southern cause. I heard of his murder, and that the guilty perpetrator of this foul died had been arrested by the citizens of Jefferson county, and sent to the Luttle Rock Jail in irons. The supposed murderer's name is Thos. Lee, of White Sulphur Springs, and near neighbor of ex-Sheriff Kendalls. I have never heard it charged at Pine Bi ff that exessheriff Kendall was a loyalist during the time I mention as eve. CINCINNATI, Sept 19, Indii ana Senators, Mr. Johnson said:

We do ht not that upon each of the oth ases mentioned by the Commercial the truth would put quite as diff rent a face as upon the one commented upon by Subscriber ' Very likely each one of the persons named was a 'faithful rebel,' and perhaps committed outrages upon Union men, for which the said Union men may now he paying them back! The victims may have been ex-rebels and the perpetrators of the crimes 'faithful Union men A Mississippi paper reported the as-sa sinution of a Confederate officer the other day near Natchez, doubtless h some person who had been aggrieved by the said officer while he was in anthority. The war has left a terrible legacy of evil hehind it at best. To misrepresent the facts is only to aggravate it and to pave the way for a vet more terrible conflict.

Mr Forsyth, the a' le editor of the Mobile Register, went to Philadelphia as a member of the National Conservative Convention Afterward, he traveled pre ty extensively through the Northern States, writing letters home to his paper He described with great and enthusiastic admiration many things that he saw, but he came to the conclusion that, if there should be another civil war in this country, growing out of the meeting of Congress, the people of the South should stay that, when he makes a lecturing tour.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Interesting Interview with the Prisoner at Fortress Monroe-

Mr. Davis "a Dying Man," &c. [From the Petersburg Va. Index, sept. 22.] We are happy to be able to lay before our readers this morning an anthentic account of the interview between Mr. Davis and Mr. John D. Kelley, about which the papers have for the past few days had so much to say, which was mere speculation. Our correspondent promises, as will be seen, to follow this with another letter on the same theme:

To the Editor of the Index . Please let me say through your paper that I have just returned from Washington without any bishop, priest, or deacon accompanying me, that I wrote a letter to cur ma tyr. Jeff Davis, some weeks since, to which I got no response until the return of Mrs. Davis, he not being allowed to write that in compliance with the spirit of that response I hastened to Fortress Monroe, on the 17th inst., just as I have done many a time for our poor solders or poor negroes under sentince; that I proceeded to Washington, after aeeing the terrible condition of Mr. Davis, and have come back this morning, foot-sore and weary, not without hopes for the final satety of him whom I conscionationally believe to be about the foot-sore and weary, not without hopes for the final satety of him whom I conscientiously believe to be about the ablest and best man in America. Prudence, whom I seldom listen to, and whom I naturally hate as the devil does his water, makes me silent for the present about my Washington visit. I will tell about it hereafter. Mr. Davis is greatly delitated and declining very fast. During breakfast, he gave us some rich, sparkling gems of political wisdom from Burke, with his own comments on their filly, as rich as Burke's original thoughts. I only remember one other such day spent in my tife. It was at Lagrange in 1825, when LaFayette and Cardinal Me zofonte were debut ng on high matters of iterature and art, and I was a mere silent a sorbent of the golden treasure of liquid tho ght.

I arrived at the Fortress about an hour before Mr. Davis left his prison. This time I spent in read ng some of the numerons pipers that were tought in that morning. Presently Mrs. Davis ji nedme, and we had a very agreea le "scussion, in which he maintained that the American people as any on the carth, and I maintaired, chiefly for aruments sake, that the art ocracy of all lands, the rail aristocracy, were marked by superior to the masses of the people. I ma na sined that the carecines of the man of the reaction type of caracter which was not even yet at minded woman.

At this time we saw a stendor, shadowy, tottering form approach the door. Something in my heart told me it was Mr. Davis. Strange, mystic human hart, with its div nation and prophecies! Bible of the true! Infalli le God-word to every linman soul that has ever been magnetized with love! I had known this man at a time when his word swayed an empire emposed of as noble men and as glorious God-gitted women as has ever appeared in e mposed of as noble men and as glorious God-eited women as has ever appeared in the tide of time. I have obtained at his hands the sparing of the lives of forty-seven Confederate solitors during to war I got off fourteen Federal siliers condemned to death. I got his written permit—no order—to allow me to visit all the Federal prisons and aleviate, in all lawfil ways their siferings. I have prayed at the good man's beds de for a blessing of God upon him commensurate it him rey he might extend to others, and that he might hope for himself, shill die chang so it ever make him a suppliant in this bene cence.

And n whe is before me a prisoner Good Good how changed! The last time task him his brow seemed dicked not cally with the criwn of int to girt glight, with a sirt of primes in terparcs—halo of all the kingly chivalries of the past ages. Now he was bent taken, riling but oh' that voice, in timere, call not the sirt of the past ages. "Yes, I remember 't will. It is the com-pend of Christia ty. The wild has nivpend of Christ at ty. The world has nover yet apprecated that aspect the e.c. tomo of Curist. "I have read more in the cld books, probably, than you have Mr. Davis. Let me receive to you an instance in the Pite of Julian. He had appressed and thwarted Cyril, of Jurusalem, in various ways, at last, on going to the Parth an war, he met the good Bishop in great distress on account of the meeties of he fock. He said to him, Cyril, where is your carpenuer God new? The Bish panswered, Perhaps making a coffin for the RomanEmperor. "Thave never heard that before, but it is full of significance and a terrile re uke to unholy pride and self-confidence.

After prayer we proceeded to breakfast, which had three covers, one each for Mr. and Mrs. Davis and one for me. The breakfast consisted of some rice rills and toast, good tea, butter, and a few oysters.

loast good tea, butter, and a few cysters.

Mr. Davis eat very spanngly.

I omitted to mention in its proper place that Mrs. Davis met him at the door, put her arms around his neck, and kissed him. After he was seated she brought him their little child, which he kissed, seated on his knee, and, as I thought by the motion of his beautifully chiseled lips, prayed accretly for.

After breakfast, Bishop Green, of Mississippi, was introduced. The greeting was cordial and affectionate. Mr. Davis alluded with great delicacy to some family afflictions of the Bishop, to which the latter responded with a quivering lip and a tearful eye. Hereafter I will give you a pen and ink picture of these two men as they limined themselves on the canvas of memory. Here I only propose to give a part of the conversation that occupied that whole morning. Our people all love and revere our late excellent President and revere our late excellent President. To meet their craving to know something about him from the heart, or inner life side of him. I will write some two or three papers more on this subject. I ought not close without saying that he evinces the mest thorough spirit of forgiveness towards his enemies. Like every sensible man, he separates the wheat from the chaff, and does not condemn the Northern people in mass; neither Democrats, Republicans, or Radicals are fiends or angels. They and we are poor living mortals, fullowing the best light we have, and should be charitable to one another's faults.

Emma Hardnage then spoke at length on the connection of Mr. Pierpon with spritualism, claiming it was the faith and glory of his life, and the sacred odor of his memory. A Mr. Holmes on the platform was here observed to be strangly affected. He appeared to be in griping pains. It was thought he had an attack of inc pient cholera, but it soon appeared that Mr. Pierpont spirit had en pitted a poetical message into his medium mind. The gent eman got up in a state of nater al straction and severe thys al terpolity, and recited thirteen versus which Mr. Pierpon t was purported to have sent by celestial cite ten minutes lefter, apparently the wires did it work well—cwire possibly, to the privation of the mere was brothen and the sense jangled.
